CARMEL CYMBAL

Vol. 16 • No. 15 CARMEL, CALIFORNIA • APRIL 10, 1942 FIVE CENTS

SAYS THE EDITOR

WHAT, NO MULES?

The Army Day parade in Monerey was a gyp, according to Tallulah Elston, one of The Cymbal's subscribers. She says she stood for hours waiting for it and watching it, and saw no mules. It seems that she went solely for the purpose of seeing mules—Army mules. She asks us to protest. She puts it: "What's an Army parade without a mule? Maybe there are no more Army mules. Maybe there are just Ann Sheridans.

A LITTLE MATTER FOR THE PUBLICITY HOUNDS TO GIVE THOUGHT TO

Carmel's city council, at its meeting Wednesday night, authorized payment of $25 out of the city treasury to the California Water & Telephone Company. This was a bill for water used by ONE comfort station on Carmel beach for the period of ONE month.

The explanation of this, given by Councilman McCreery, commissioner of streets, whose responsibility this service to the public is, was so disgusting and repellent that we can't print it or give more than a hint of it. Suffice it to say that this comfort station has been be-fouled and wrecked week after week throughout the winter, its plumbing torn out, its windows broken and the frames used for firewood. The water bill for March was caused by the water pipe having been wrenched from the wall, and the waste of water not discovered until the meter was read.

Carmel invites the world to visit us; everybody, anybody who has any money to spend. We'll build you a Ferris wheel on the beach, and a roller coaster if you'll let the comfort stations alone.

HERE IS ONE OF THOSE UNBELIEVABLE THINGS

It seems to us that this that follows comes under the "No, it can't be true" department.

One day last week Skipper Ackroyd, an official of the Carmel Girl Scouts, provided the two Carmel newspapers with information about ceremonies attendant on the breaking of ground for the Girl Scouts Victory Garden on Junipero street. This information included the announcement that Fred Godwin, member of the city council and commissioner of public health and safety, would officiate as the ground-breaker.

Shortly after this information reached the newspaper offices, Mayor Keith Evans was called Carmel's Eighth Annual Bach Festival is under way. The date has been set for July 20-26, when once again the Bach Festival Chorus voices will triumphantly ring out in the proclamation of God's Omnipotence and Goodness, which is the unending theme of the music of Johann Sebastian Bach.

The Cymbal Recommends Election of McCreery, Godwin, Ida Newberry

This is one of the most important and vital elections in the history of Carmel.

The voters of the city will decide whether or not they will manifest their approval of a city administration which for two years has given this community a good government by returning to office two of the incumbent councilmen, Fred Godwin and P. A. McCreery.

They will also decide which one of three other candidates shall sit with the present four councilmen and most effectively assist them in carrying on policies which have generally been for the best interests of the community.

The Cymbal sincerely urges the people to return Fred Godwin and P. A. McCreery to the council for the next four years.

It also as sincerely recommends the election of Mrs Perry Newberry as the third candidate to vote for next Tuesday.

Mrs. Perry Newberry

Mrs. Newberry has a particular fitness for the office of city councilman of Carmel. We consider the citizens of Carmel particularly fortunate in that she has made herself available for public service. She has lived for many years in the close environment of public service. As the widow of Perry Newberry she combines with her rare intelligence, her courage and independence of action, a heritage of vital concern for the welfare of this community. The thoughts of her late husband were ever on matters of community concern and for years she shared these thoughts. She is not alone the spirit of Perry Newberry today, but she is, too, the material force capable of carrying on those principles and ideals which made him over a long span of years the one outstanding human element in the battle to maintain and perpetuate Carmel standards and the Carmel way of community life.

As a woman, Mrs. Newberry has a right to membership on the Carmel city council. Women have contributed more than their numerical share to the social and civic advancement of the city. They have had representation on the council through only five of their sex during the corporate life of the community. More than 40 per cent of the taxpayers of Carmel are independent women and widows.

As a member of the city council she will be an important part of the legislative machinery which, in the hands of Keith Evans, Bernard Rowntree, Fred Godwin and P. A. McCreery, has courageously and without discrimination served the people faithfully and well

Fred Godwin

No member of the present city council can more justifiably expect the support of the

DON'T GET EXCITED; SIREN SATURDAY NOON ONLY A TEST

It was announced at the council meeting Wednesday night by Councilman Rowntree, that the blowing of the fire siren tomorrow, (Saturday) noon, is NOT an air raid warning or an alert, but simply a test of the siren, preparatory to an adoption of a new raid signal to be announced later.

Hogg Retires as Pebble Beach Gate Keeper

The retirement of Worthington Hogg, keeper of the gate, is a thing that makes us want to settle down at the typewriter and expand on the subject of a good life of service. Come November 19, he will be 81 and he is proud to tell his age.

For the past 12 years he has been in the Carmel Hill gate and happy in his work because the people who passed daily through the portals were genuinely friendly and when he decided to give up the work and go East, everybody in the Del Monte Properties Company, including Sam Morse, was sorry. He has been up at five every morning in the house above the gate. This week he is staying at McPhillips Hotel in Carmel, and bidding his friends goodbye before leaving on Monday for Scotia, New York, to be near ones of his own blood. He has four nephews and two nieces there who are married and have children, and who urge him to come there to live.

As a boy Worthington Hogg went to work in a huge wholesale house in Baltimore and quit only when, after 48 years, the house went bankrupt.

MYAMOTO GARDENS SOLD TO MRS. MUNSELL; RED CROSS GETS PRODUCE

Mrs. J. E. Munsell of Carmel Highlands has bought the Myamoto truck gardens down between the Mission and the river. She plans to continue raising vegetables for sale, but the entire proceeds will go to the Red Cross.

on the telephone by Wilma Cook, editor of the Pine Cone, who demanded to know how and why Councilman Godwin had been selected for this honorary function. The mayor informed Mrs. Cook that Miss Ackroyd had selected him. Mrs. Cook then called Skipper Ackroyd and, according to Miss Ackroyd, demanded to know by what authority she had made this selection. Miss Acroyd, a bit, and naturally, surprised at this preemptory attitude on the part of a newspaper editor, assumed full responsibility for the action. The editor of the Pine cone thereupon declared: "I'm glad to know that you are willing to be responsible."

On Friday the Pine Cone printed the story of the Victory Garden ceremonies, eliminating all reference to Councilman Godwin and his part in the program.

The Pine Cone had previously announced its opposition to Councilman Godwin as a candidate for reelection.

A QUESTION, OR QUESTIONS, I WOULD ASK MISS MARTIN

Dear Miss Martin:

I read your manuscript, "The Pacifist's Position in War Time'" when you turned it in to me. I read it again, of course, as I set it in type. I have just re-read it from the current issue of The Cymbal. I find the practical side of my mind troubled by it. I may be very elemental in what I have to say about it, what I have to ask you about it, but, after all, the whole situation today seems to be elemental, something that the two-and-two-make-four stand-by applies to.

It is clear that you are definitely and persistently opposed to war as a method of settling international disputes. So am I. It is clear that you opposed our entrance into World War I. So did I. It is clear that you were opposed to our entrance into the present war between Germany and the nations of Europe. I was not enthusiastic about getting into that.

But you say in your article that "the true pacifist opposes all war as a means of settling international disputes, as an agency of human action, not only in time of peace but in time of war". I have accented the last four words because they appear to me to be the actual basis for your article, the point that you are making, in fact.

And that is what troubles me.

Let me state my mental perturbation this way:

You are an automobile driver. You are, I am sure, a careful driver. You are just as firm in your determination to drive your car with democratic principles, with consideration for others, as you are in your faith and belief that these principles are best exemplified in a firm stand against war, any war, at any time, of any kind.

You are driving your car along the highway with this care and consideration, when another car approaches from the opposite direction. It is driven by one who has not your principles, not your care, not your consideration for others. He is driving at excessive speed, recklessly, and without concern for you or for those who are driving with him. As your car approaches he swerves toward you. You are faced with choice, either to let him crash into you, endangering your life and those in his car, or you may swerve far to the right and hit, probably kill, a dog which is standing by the side of the road. You swerve and kill the dog, a deliberate act which, when you started on your ride, you could not conceive of doing.

Now, as I understand you, it is your aim and that of other pacifists to proselyte your idea and ideals throughout the country. You and they make deliberate and concerted efforts to do this. Suppose, beginning ten years ago, you had been successful and that, on December 7 of last year, the majority of the people and a majority in the government had been won over to your beliefs and your principles. What, if that were the case, would this pacifist nation have done on December 7?

You may answer me by declaring that there would have been no December 7 if we had been a pacifist nation. But do you really believe that? Hadn't this government, and its commercial interests, to the very point of scandal, as many have contended, done everything possible to placate Japan and prevent war in the Pacific? Hadn't we shipped Japan scrap iron, oil and other war materials almost up to the very eve of Pearl Harbor?

What I am trying to say is that our present war with Japan is, in its expediency, identical with your killing the dog. You see, one's actions are often controlled, not by his own principles, but by the principles and actions of others. After Japanese planes, during what this nation believed to be honest attempts at peace negotiations, killed 4,000 Americans at Pearl Harbor, would you, and your pacifist followers, have turned the other cheek?

As I see it, this war with Japan is not to "establish the 'four freedoms' of President Roosevelt" (quoting you), but to prevent Japan from taking possession of California, of the entire United States, including a certain little cottage on Mission Street in Carmel where you now live in a peace and tranquility disturbed only occasionally by a "frantic citizen" on your porch, waving his arms at you and shouting "Put out that fire!"

Of course, you may feel that the loss of your home, your liberty, your life would not be too great a price to pay for an eventual world without war. But can you be certain enough that such a course would result in that utopia—certain enough that you can ask your neighbor and his neighbor and his to pay that price?

—W. K. B.

Carmel Red Cross Holds Demonstration Of War Work at City Park Saturday

The Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross will on to interested persons how it is Saturday, Apr. 11, demonstrate prepared to bring aid to the injured and to feed the hungry in case of any catastrophe. The work of all the units will be shown from 1 p m. to 4 p. m. at the City Park.

The Red Cross will display and explain equipment. Parked ambulances, mobile canteen, first aid station, a registration office, and a message center will be open for inspection.

In operation the ambulance will be sent out to pick up stretcher cases (and deliver them to First Aid station for treatment (the cases will be played by persons who have volunteered to play this part).

A First Aid station, manned by three groups of first aid post workers, operating in shifts of one hour each, will demonstrate its preparedness to care for any casualty in this community. Under the supervision of Mrs. W. H. McCabe and Fraser Hancock, these first-aiders will care for subjects brought to their station from the scene of imaginary accidents by the Motor Corps.

During the treatment by first aid a member of the Staff Assistants Corps will obtain information about the victim, such as correct name, description of condition, ultimate disposition of case, etc. All information will be filed with Registration and Information Service so that inquiries of distracted distant relatives may be answered by Red Cross telegram and separated members of the same family may be reunited.

The canteen unit will be prepared to furnish stimulating hot soup, hot drinks and food in the nature of sandwiches to victims of disaster. More complete meals will be furnished to those in need at temprorary or semi-permanent camps on locations by the food committee which will not be demonstrated at this exhibit.

The Junior Red Cross Disaster Relief Corps will demonstrate its Guides and Messenger Service by carrying messages and performing general utility service wherever needed.

All victims of disaster, injured and uninjured, will register or be registered with Registration and Information, giving correct full name, and location so that communication can be maintained.

ANOTHER GLEAM GOES WITH DODY DORCY

Dody Dorcy has left us. The girl who maintained a smile and spread cheer while she lay for months virtually helpless in her home on Monte Verde street, went to St. Helena Sanitarium Tuesday of this week. She hopes that there she may regain the strength in her limbs necessary to let her stand upright again. Carmel generally has missed the joyfulness of Dody Dorcy on Ocean Avenue for a long time, and her friends, who have sat happily by her bedside, lose her now.

CARMEL WESTERN UNION MAKES IMPROVEMENTS

Earlene Johnson, the young lady who took over Bob Smith's job at the Western Union office in Carmel, explained to us this week that the confusion in the office recently was caused by the installation of new equipment in preparation for the inevitable summer rush. They are replacing the simplex with a duplex, if you would know, a machine on which messages can be taken and sent out at the same time, thus speeding up the wireless traffic.

35 Special War Police to be Appointed

Authority for the organization of an auxiliary police force, to operate for the duration of the war, was given to Chief of Police Roy Fraties by the city council Wednesday night. He was authorized to name not more than 35 men, who have recently passed, with perfect marks their first-aid and police training course, as duly-constituted police officers.

These 35 special police have passed the standard First-Aid course with an average of 94.6 per cent and nine of them got 100 per cent.

So encouraged are they that they all enrolled for the advanced course. These police have been meeting three times a week to receive First-Aid instruction from Dr. W. H. McCabe, and two days a week for police training under Livingstone Hay, member of the Carmel Police Department. They are learning the laws of arrest and the penal code from City Attorney William L. Hudson and the use of firearms from Hugh Comstock and Clarence Tarr.

Rules for Use of Forest Theater

If you want to use the Forest Theater of commercial productions you must give the city council five days notice in advance, pay $30 for one performance, either afternoon or evening; $25 each for two performances, and $20 each for three performances. You must put up a deposit of $50 on application for its use, and all expenses for utilities, not paid by you, will be taken from this.

This is decreed by the council. Wednesday night it adopted a set of rules governing the use of the theater and the above provisions are included therein.

The youthful editors and owners of "Scoop", the weekly mimeographed newspaper are using the theater on the evening of May 9, charging 10 cents for an entertainment they plan to present. The profits will all go to the Red Cross so the city is getting no rental for the theater.

Nat Pieper of F. B. I. Will Open Public Forum Series in Carmel

Nat J. L. Pieper, superintendent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in northern California, will open a series of four public forums for Civilian Defense at the Sunset School Auditorium, next Friday, April 17. Pieper, one of J. Edgar Hoover's most capable assistants, will tell of Fifth Column activities and the work which constituted authority did to check them. his work, carried on by federal and local officers for months before Pearl Harbor, made possible the present steps for handling enemy aliens in California.

Securing Pieper as a speaker, Civilian Defense is inaugurating a series of forum programs to show the public what has been done and is being done for their protection. For this purpose a representative of Federal Bureau of Investigation is peculiarly appropriate. During more than a year prior to our actual entry into the War, J. Edgar Hoover's organization was carrying on a skillful anti-espionage campaign. Toward this end F. B. I. enlisted active cooperation of police departments and sheriff's offices all over America. Previous work in schooling small town and country peace officers to greater efficiency bore results in the campaign.

Pieper comes here at the invitation of Chief of Police Roy Fraties. He is well remembered on Monterey Peninsula for previous talks on F. B. I. work. A graduate of Washington University at St. Louis, Mo., he left the practice of law and later became one of J. Edgar Hoover's staff assistants in Washington. Thereafter he headed bureau work in cities of East, Middle West and Pacific coast. He is skilled in speaking and talks with a familiarity with his subject which few criminal investigators possess. Those who hear him will get some startling and valuable information regarding subversive activities.

DR. MacDOUGAL TALKS ON GUAYULE APRIL 11

Dr. Daniel T. MacDougal will tell the assembled delegates to the library convention at Del Monte tomorrow, April 11, all about guayule (pronounced, if you please, "y-oo-lee").

He'll tell how Dr. Francis E. Lloyd of Carmel, now professor emeritus of botany in McGill University, Montreal, wrote the book in 1911 which told everything anybody could want to know about the plant; how William McCallum, botanist in charge of the experimental laboratories of the Inter-Continental Rubber Company, has carried on the work of cultivating the plant, and how the government now has guayule seeds enough to plant about 1,000 acres this year, not 45,000 acres as has been reported.

THIS EXPLAINS WHAT BOB NORTON IS BUSY ABOUT

Maybe some of you have seen Bob Norton hammering boards on his building, the old Lynn Hodges stables, at Junipero and Ocean, and maybe you've thought that he was simply trying to make the place more attractive or, better, less unsightly. That's only part of his purpose. He has 30 frozen articles in that barn and he's closing the seams in the walls to prevent them getting damp as well as frozen. They are 30 automobiles, brand new, with brand new tires on them They are part of the supply of Peninsula automobile dealers. Several hundred others are stored in other parts of the Peninsula and hundreds of thousands are similarly housed and guarded in various sections of the country.

We were interested in whether or not, when the war ends, these cars could be operated cheaply. Norton ventures the opinion that, to the contrary, they will be extra expensive because, he avers, the automobile factories, having changed all their machinery over for war production, will not be able for some time after peace comes to start again making cars.

Dr. Kellersberger has been decorated by the Belgian government for his work in African sleeping sickness, and has been received by King George of England and King Farouk of Egypt. The wife of Dr. Kellersberger is an effective platform speaker, and the author of three books, "Congo Crosses", "God's Ravens", and "Song After Sorrow." There will be no admission charge and the public is cordially invited to hear the thrilling story of a great humanitarian project.

BLOCK WARDENS GET FIRE-FIGHTING DATA

Two hundred block wardens gathered at Sunset Auditorium Monday and Tuesday evenings, April 6 and 7, for more fire-fighting instruction. Monday's lecture covered newest methods of controlling grass and forest fires. The lecturer, William Pennington, of the State Forest Service, has had years of experience in this work and his talk was highly illuminating.

The Tuesday lecture by Paul Mercurio covered handling of fires inside the house. At the same meeting the wardens had the opportunity of seeing a demonstration by Charles Smith and William Hicks, from the office of the State Fire Marshal at Sacramento, on handling incendiary bombs.

Just another reason why block wardens are valuable people to know. They're doing the drudgery of attending lectures to get information you in turn can get from them for the asking.

PHILIPPINES MOVIE AT AUDITORIUM FRIDAY

A motion picture of the Philippine Islands will be shown at Sunset Auditorium this evening (Friday). The picture is called "Remember Manila" and depicts the life and habits of the people of Manila from 1900 to 1941. The show is bejng presented by the Filipino Club and the proceeds will be donated to the Red Cross.

NEW SHELL JEWELRY MADE BY MRS. BILLINGER

Mrs. W. G. Billinger of the Green Lantern is creating the cutest thing in junk jewelry (so called by those in the business) on the market today. And it isn't really on the market because it is a hobby which grew and grew until there was a surplus which Mrs. Billinger gave to one Carmel shop, the Corner Cupboard. The earrings, necklaces and pins are made of shells in the form of flowers and a lapel nadget is shells in the form of a bee. The earrings are tiny shells clustered to look like button dahlias and dyed green, rose, coral and a dozen other colors.

The really amusing fact about the whole thing is that the shells, instead of coming from Carmel, were gathered at Miami last year while the Billingers were a'trailering.

PAULINE PIERSON PAINTS POPPY PICTURES

Pauline Pierson has just returned to Oakland after spending ten days here. She came down to arrange for the renting of her house and brought a few of her unique flower pieces which have been exhibited at Gumps in San Francisco. The paintings are semi-abstract, semi-naturalistic and highly decorative water colors using as subject matter the life cycle of the flower. She has one of the California Poppy ranging from the tiny bud to the full-blown flower, and the same with the convolvulus (morning glory to you and me), the fuchsia and the saintpaulia or African violet.

EUSTACE LINEN SHOP CLOSES THIS WEEK

Mrs. Vera Vernon is closing the Eustace Linen Shop on Dolores street. Another landmark, alas. James A. Eustace opened the shop here about 14 years ago, closed the one in Monterey to do it. He had opened the one in Monterey in 1906 at the time of the San Francisco fire which burned his linen shop there. Mrs. Vernon worked with him many years, bought the Carmel Shop seven years ago. She lives in Pacific Grove where she owns her home but plans to make other Carmel business connections which are not well enough formulated to tell about yet.

FIRE AT LA PLAYA; NOT PUBLICITY, EITHER

For Easter, La Playa Hotel may not have had an egg hunt, but it had a $200 fire. One Carmel character was said to have nodded his head and remarked sadly, "What extremes this Fred Godwin will go just to entertain his guests!"

But it wasn't Godwin's idea at all. Someone left an electric iron on. It burned through the ironing board and fired a window casement. Carmel firemen with their engines and prompt action soon had the flames and Fred Godwin under control.

Two hundred dollars is an awful lot to pay even to keep the home fires burning.

DOG LOST; NEIGHBOR SEEKS OWNER FOR FOUR DAYS

Lloyd Lemon, Carmel's Pet Store owner, found a beautiful Llewellyn setter wandering around his yard in La Loma Terrace last Monday. He got in touch with The Cymbal. We found owners who had lost their dogs, but not this one. Lemon usually goes to Monterey on Tuesdays and when he does he calls on Loren Duarte, who also runs a pet store. This Tuesday he didn't go for some reason. Yesterday, Thursday, he discovered that the dog belonged to the Duartes who happen, too, to live two blocks from his house in La Loma Terrace.

Martin Flavin Tells a Moving Story Of a Man, a Girl and a Baby In a Soviet Courtroom

The room has white washed walls and a low ceiling. Crude wooden benches occupy most of the floor space and they are comfortably filled with a score of interested spectators, men and women, peasant and urban faces, shawls and mangy fur, felt boots and rags, a motley crew that might have stepped right out of Pushkin's pages. There is the usual sickening smell of uncured fur and unwashed proletarians.

At the end of the room is a low dais with a table and three chairs behind it. The judge occupies the center one. He is a young proletarian with an ordinary face which ceases to be ordinary as you watch it, for behind the eyes there is the glow of an extraordinary zeal, a fine determination for and confidence in justice. His robe of office is a dirty sweater and his thick felt boots are visible beneath the table. At either side, elbow to elbow with him, sit his co-judges, women of middle age with broad flat peasant faces and shawls around their heads. One of them could have sat for Rodin. The history of the world is in her eyes, and great and profoundly simple wisdom. There is a fourth chair at the end of the table for the court reporter, a young girl with a messy looking note book in which she seems to write at her discretion. The machinery of justice has been reduced to fundamentals.

Standing before the bar is a girl with straight blond hair bobbed at her shoulders, a broad squat figure, and thick fat legs above her boots. She might be nineteen or twenty. She is the plaintiff in the case which she is now presenting to the judges. Behind her is a younger sister with a month-old baby in her arms. The baby has been dressed for the occasion and is swathed in a gay colored shawl. The sister marches back and forth before the bar jouncing the baby up and down and crooning to it, and pausing now and then to listen to the case. There is some calculation in the gesture. The defendant is a young man with narrow face and a saturnine expression. He sits alone on a bench and studies the ceiling of the court with that half-amused, half-bored expression common to defendants.

The case is very simple as the plaintiff states it. The man is the father of her child. He has denied paternity and refused support. Now she claims it. She is a factory worker, and the man worked in the factory where she was employed. She earns one hundred and fifty roubles a month. The man had a room in the factory. She visited him there at night. Her story is simple and direct and told without emotion.

The defendant takes the stand. He was a worker in the factory but is now a student. He earns two hundred and seventy-five roubles a month. He does not deny her story but—he was not the only recipient of her favors. There were others, oh, yes indeed! The plaintiff is immobile. The sister sniffs audibly, jounces the baby harder, and suddenly begins to weep. The defendant is told to be specific. He goes on a little lamely. He has been away at times and another man has occupied his room, but the girl still went there. That seems to be all. The judge inquires if there are witnesses. It seems there are, and they are called in from the hall where they are waiting, two men, workers in the factory, one of them a watchman on the factory gate. The first one does not yield much information. He had heard that they were intimate, that is to say, the girl and the man who occupied the room while the defendant was away. The man was a director in the factory. It was rumored that the girl went there at night. There had been talk about it. The sister sobs aloud.

The plaintiff is called back to the stand. She does not deny these visits but maintains that it was business only, conferences on factory matters. There are broad grins and snickerings among the spectators, and the sister looks around to glare at them. The watchman takes the stand. It is true, he says, that he passed her through the gate while the defendant was away. He does not know how many times. He is pretty vague and hazy and indefinite. The co-judge with the Rodin face asks her first question, and it is a question of the date. The watchman can't remember. What season of the year was it? He scratches his head and shuffles his feet. Was it winter time or spring? Cold or warm? Was there snow upon the ground?—He has a flash of recollection. Yes, there was snow and it was cold. He does remember that. There is murmur of approval in the court. The child was born on February 1 and there is no snow in May.

There is no further evidence to take. The judges rise and move toward the room where they deliberate. And now the sister springs up from her seat and holds the baby out to them. "Look!" she demands, "Look only at the baby's face, and you will see that that man is his father." She strips the shawl from the child's face and holds the infant toward them. "Look! Look! They are as like as peas." The defendant's grin is sheepish. Spectators stand and crowd about. "Look!" she pleads. "And you will know beyond mistake." But the judges do not look and will not look. The young judge answers her: the resemblance of a month old child is not good evidence. The woman with the Rodin face nods her agreement to his words, and, solemn faced, they file away

They are gone for half an hour and, in their absence, there is comedy, for the sister undertakes to try the case again and this time for the audience. She harangues the crowd, half laughing and half crying, holds out the child to one and to another, points out the chin, the nose, the eyes, and then her scornful finger turns on the defendant who carries off the thing as best he can and not too well. It is a trying situation for a man, even in soviet Russia. He grins and turns his head this way and that and will, at all cost, avoid inspection of the child. The sister laughs and sobs, entreats, upbraids, condemns.—An avalanche of language buries the helpless man. He would not be heard if he had anything to say which, indeed,

Great Cellist in Carmel Apr. 18

The name of Piatigorsky does not need introduction to Carmel or to the world. It is synonymous with the greatest cello-playing of the period. When the celebrated Russian—soon to be an American citizen—plays in the Sunset School Auditorium here Saturday evening, April 18, the Carmel Music Society will be bringing to its subscribers the highest artistry, unlimited technical skill, depths of feeling and poetry, and an unrivalled beauty and volume of tone, in the person of Gregor Piatigorsky.

Since his first appearance in this country in 1929, Piatigorsky has played as soloist eight seasons with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, ten with the Chicago Symphony and seven with the New York Philharmonic. It will be the second time that the Music Society has brought him to Carmel.

One of the glories of a Piatigorsky recital is the instrument on which he plays. It is a Montagnana of the year 1739, conservatively valued at $30,000. On this priceless cello Carmel will hear the Boccherini Sonata in C, the Sonata in E minor, Brahms, Urokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet", and a program which will reveal the virtuosity as well as the grandeur of the Piatigorsky playing.

COME HOME; ALL'S FORGIVEN

If any of the Bassett "dear relations or polished friends" has our copy of Paul Kearney's "50 Games of Solitaire", will he, she or they return same to sorrowing family pronto?

As a rule, I know to the last punctuation mark just where any of my books is sojourning, but this seems to have escaped my vigilant eye.

I quote (again) Carolyn Wells' verse which is good enough for more than one repeat appearance:

NON-RETURNABLE

They borrow books they will not buy.
They have no ethics or religions;
I wish some kind Burbanksian guy
Could cross my books with homing pigeons!

WE'RE WALKING NOW

The whole aspect and character of travel has been changed by the war. Now that such a large proportion of the globe is closed to tourists, those who have been wont to think of traveling in terms of long ocean voyages and wholesale gulping down of noteworthy sights will have to change their approach radically. It's similar to what happens when you change from riding in trains or automobiles to walking on foot. You can see a lot either way, but what you see on foot you have time to digest, to enjoy leisurely and to remember for future happiness in the store of memory pictures.

Sinclair Lewis said something in "Dodsworth" which is very much to the point today:

'He who has seen one cathedral ten times has seen something; he who has seen ten cathedrals once has seen but little; and he who has spent half an hour in each of a hundred cathedrals has seen nothing at all. Four hundred pictures all on a wall are four hundred times less interesting than one picture; and no one knows a cafe till he has gone there often enough to know the names of the waiters.

"These are the laws of travel."

We could, you know, spend a good deal of time right here on the Peninsula going "ten times" to certain beautiful treasures, studying them and making them our own in the true sense of the expression.

We haven't the cathedrals, perhaps, but we have the Carmel Mission (how many of the things in the collection of antiques there do you know in any detail?); the lovely Oriental treasures in Marsh's, many of them just as rare and valuable as those in the famous art museums; the priceless etchings in the Carmel Public Library by Duerer, Rembrandt, Meryon, etc. We have historical objects of our own California past, in such places as the old Customs House in Monterey and the First Theater and other adobes of the early days.

Or if you don't like guidebook sightseeing and aren't interested in imagining what life was like a hundred years ago, or if, when all is said and done, you still think anything is more worth looking at if it's somewhere else in a foreign land, trot right up to the public library and begin looking over the stock of books about every corner of the world. You'll find plenty to fill a practically endless stretch of evenings with arm-chair travel. If you've been places yourself you'll love seeing them through other eyes and having the thrill of your trips brought back again by the lively narratives and vivid pictures which characterize the best—and the majority—of these volumes. All yours, free, to take home and enjoy!

HAROLD LLOYD'S HUNTING RECORD

A number of years ago, at a Hollywood luncheon, some of the masculine stars were bragging about their achievements as hunters. Harold Lloyd was present, but he sat in complete silence, until someone put a direct question to him.

Then he said, "You know, I'm a bit proud of my hunting record. I'm nearly 40 years old—and I've never killed a single bird or a single animal." Knowing what most men of the great outdoors are like, it must have taken courage to make a remark like that! Almost as much as it took Lew Ayres to refuse to kill people, perhaps . .

FRISBIE FRAGMENTS

Among some odds and ends saved from the pre-Masten era of The Cymbal, I found the following bit which had apparently bubbled up out of Edith's subconscious during one of the more hectic moments in the office:

Marj'rie's disposition will resweeten stuff gone sour.
Marj'rie turns out copy by the everlasting hour.
And Bassett's editorials
Wax wowier and wowier.
Lynda combs a comet's hair and see-saws on the stars.
Kathryn rides her brakeless bike without the handle-bars.
And Dorothea Castelhun
Placates her typing Mars.

O. K. for me to use it, Edith? Thanks a lot!

Two-Piano Team Coming Apr. 25

Dene Denny and Hazel Watrous, always on the watch for fine artists whose talents would be pleasing to the eyes and ears of Carmel audiences, will present on April 25, Guy and Lois Maier, skilled two-piano team, at Sunset Auditorium.

Guy Maier has an outstanding personality and a stage wit that is unusual in a piano artist. He was originally teamed with Lee Pattison, a combination which made two-piano success history. When the Maier-Pattison team broke up, Maier joined forces with his wife and they now present the finest popular two-piano concert on the stage. They are both charming and gracious, and pick their selections with feeling for their audiences

Norburgs Continue Service Bureau

The Community Information Service is leading a shuttle-on-a-loom sort of an existence. Originating in Las Tiendas building it was moved by its hard-working owners, Gunnar and Barbara Norburg, to the long, glassed-in shop in Pine Inn, and from there back to Las Tiendas again.

When the service's income failed to bring in enough to cover the rent, the Norburgs feared that they would be forced to discontinue the service. However, at this month's meeting of the Carmel Business Association it was the unanimous decision of members present that ways and means of keeping the bureau going had to be worked out. So, for the months of April and May, at least, the service will continue. After that it will be up to subscribers and their contributions whether they will continue to get the benefits of the bureau.

Official Civilian Defense News

Meet Your Senior Warden for Precinct 3

(Here's John H. Neikirk, heading up Precinct No. 3)

"Hard work", I should say so, Mr. Neikirk told our reporter apropos of the life of a Senior Warden in Carmel's Civilian Defense. "But it's certainly worthwhile to see Carmel shaping up into a community with a well knit defense organization. Precinct 3, I'm glad to say, has a warden for every block, and every warden is doing a bang-up job of attending classes and relaying his information to residents of his block.

"We had a good start in this precinct. Before December 7 Waldo Hicks, Kenneth Stevenson, William Booker, John Gilbert and yours truly took the C. D. course in Monterey. As a result we were ready to hop right on the job in Carmel and we're pleased with results to date. There's still work to be done—telling residents how to prepare for any eventuality—but it's being done just as rapidly as we can find time to do it.

"Block Wardens are busy people. They have livings to earn. They have a lot to learn in connection with Civilian Defense. And the final job of passing pertinent information along to householders can't be done overnight. But nobody in the precinct 3 organization is attending movies or fixing up stamp collections when Civilian Defense work needs to be done."

Paper Drive for March Amounts To $288.41

Twenty-eight tons of paper were collected in Carmel last month as a result of the Civilian Defense Salvage Drive. And in addition to helping fill the country's need for paper, this yielded $288.41 net. Thirty-eight dollars of this went to the Boy Scouts as their pro-rata share of paper collected. The remainder goes into the Civilian Defense fund where it is badly needed for the new siren which Carmel should have.

Schedule of Future Paper Collections

To expedite handling of paper, Alan Campbell, in charge of this salvage operation, has scheduled definite dates for future collections in various parts of Carmel. The collection day in each case is Saturday. April 11 is set aside to handle collections from Pebble Beach. April 18 to be devoted to Hatton Fields, Carmel Woods, Carmel Valley, Carmel Highlands, Carmel Point and Precinct 4. April 25 for Precincts 2 and 3 (Precinct 2 is bounded by Ocean avenue, 10th street, San Carlos and Carmel Bay.) (Precinct 3 covers the area between San Carlos, Ocean, City Limits, Rio and Santa Lucia). May 2 for Precincts 1 and 5 (Precinct 1 includes area between Tenth street, San Carlos, Santa Lucia and the Bay. Precinct 5 covers area between San Carlos, Ocean the Bay and the City Line.)

Please remember that this salvage operation is all being done by volunteer women workers—most of them busy housewives. A sick child, or important unexpected guests, might prevent your paper being collected on schedule. Don't get discouraged. Keep saving.

Here Are Block Wardens for Precinct 3

With a view to putting residents in touch with their Block Wardens, Civilian Defense is publishing one precinct listing each week, showing the warden for each block ,and the blocks that have no wardens. This week's precinct, No 3, including area between San Carlos, Ocean, City Limits, Rio Road and Santa Lucia—is completely organized.

HOW YOU CAN HELP SPEED UP HANDLING OF SALVAGE PAPER

Just a few simple rules will help in the handling of paper at the warehouse and increase the net profit.

1. Tie newspapers in bundles 7 inches thick, folded as they come from the newsstands.

2. Tie magazines in bundles 7 inches thick, with sizes graduated

3. Use heavy cord if possible. If not, use five thicknesses of string.

Experience shows that paper so wrapped handles best at the warehouse, and fits in the trucks with a minimum of waste space.

Wardens Get Fire Fighting Data

Two hudred Block Wardens gathered at Sunset Auditorium Monday and Tuesday evenings, April 6 and 7 for more fire-fighting instruction. Monday's lecture covered newest methods of controlling grass and forest fires. The lecturer, William Pennington, has had years of experience in this work and his talk was highly illuminating. The Tuesday lecture by Paul Mercurio covered handling of fires inside the house.

Just another reason why Block Wardens are valuable people to know. They're doing the drudgery of attending lectures to get information you in turn can get from them for the asking.

Four Fine Arts in Benefit Program For Civilian Defense

Like all volunteer organizations for war work, Civilian Defense needs money — and will probably continue to need it for the duration. Most fittingly for Carmel, a group of artists are furnishing the first notable contribution. Three musicians and a dancer will give a benefit program on the afternoon of May 3 at the Carmel Playhouse.

This program of fine music and dancing may prove the first of other similar efforts by an element which has been prominent in the village during its entire existence. The artists give their services, Ted Kuster gives the theater for bare lighting and operating expenses, Kit Whitman gives her time and work at handling the business end, including ticket sales, John Cunningham gets out art posters for the fun of it.

As for the program, it speaks for itself. It will consist of a violin sonata, written by Elaine Lavrans (Mrs. James Hopper), whose work as a composer is already attracting much genuine enthusiasm among musicians and critics. Miss Lavrans will accompany John Selby Metcalf Jr., who will play the solo parts.

Clarita Navarro, whose recent recital at the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco was very successful, will sing an aria and several songs, all of these to be French selections.

Claire Lauche, who worked with the famous Adolf Bohm arranging dances for ballets, will dance to a suite by Elaine Lavrans and do several short numbers.

For the perusal of music lovers Hal Garrott will furnish more intelligent news and comment concerning this program later on.

To Enlarge Home

The restoration of the Gribben-Parks home in The Highlands, which was partly destroyed by fire last month, will be more than a restoration. In addition there will be a new bedroom at the top with a panoramic view of the coast and ocean and a few things like an additional fireplace and bath. Louise Gribben's mother, Mrs. Armina Parks, happened fortunately to be away at the time of the fire and will be surprised upon her return to find the improvements. During the rebuilding Mrs. Gribben and her sister, Julie Parks, are occupying Dick Norris' house across the street from their own.

Mrs. Penha To Fly

Mrs. Michel Penha (Lala Greene) has written her daughter, Grace, that there will be no sailing from Brazil before September. Besides, she prefers to fly home and has taken a job down there to earn her transportation by air. Grace Penha is staying with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sumner Greene, while her mother is looking for gems in the jungles of Brazil. The Cymbal let an amusing typographical error slip into the recent account of Lala Penha's expedition. We called her a "germologist" instead of a gemologist.

The first son, Alan, will be graduated from Annapolis this year and Tommy is in his second year at U. C. They all plan to meet and live and work in Washington, D. C. within the next three months. It was thus extra pleasing when he said: "I like Carmel very much and hope to be able to return here for the summer." He also said that of all the people in the world he thought the Swedish and the Americans the best.

Over the CRACKER BARREL AT ROSIE'S

We hear that:

Gracie Lang has bought herself a new electric milker and the cows like it fine. She had a pretty hard time getting it to work because she bought it without a demonstration, only the instructions for setting it up. It has 35 parts and has to be set up and taken down and sterilized twice a day. Now that she has the string accustomed to this fine device, time saved may mean that some of us can see her once in a while. Congratulations, Gracie!

A very fine birthday party was held Tuesday night at the C. B. when Frances Payne celebrated. Among the many fine birthday gifts she received was a fishing pole from Helen and George McDonald. For a time it looked as if the rod might get worn out with just being tried out by the guests, because everyone had to admire it and whip it around for lightness and response. It also looked like Rosie might have to get a new set of glassware, but no casualities were incurred and Frances finally got it back in its case where she promises it will remain until the early morning hours of May 1.

Dad Wilmot has gained eight pounds since he came home from the hospital and he claims that his rapid recovery is partly due to his determination to prove that Dr. Horace Dormody isn't always right! It seems that when Dr. Horace came out to see him the first day he was home he asked Dad how he felt and Dad said: "Just fine," but he didn't look any too fine, and Dr. Horace said: "You're an old hill-billy liar," and then he left a lot of instructions as to what Dad was to do. Well, Dad said he was going to prove that Dr. Horace was the hill-billy liar, and that he wasn't anywhere near as sick as people thought he was, so he started in putting on pounds, and in a little over a week he's gained eight and he's now up most of the day and is shaving himself. (And maybe you don't think we are all tickled to death—including Dr. Horace, who may be more of a psychiatrist than Dad suspected.) The day of the weighing was an all around day for celebrating, being the anniversary of the Monterey Hospital, Dr. Horace's birthday, and Frances' birthday, so the C. B. had reason to make merry.

Delighted visitors to our valley last Sunday were a party of people from Ohio who got up here by mistake. They said the valley made them think of Ohio and Virginia and that's a very fine compliment when visitors think of home. Among the party were Master Sgt. and Mrs. Clinton Goodwin, Sgt. ## GIRLS GET ROUGH TREATMENT IN SURF

No one knows better than Virginia Campbell and Barbara Stockton how really fierce the Carmel surf can be. On Saturday afternoon, the two girls tangled with a particularly ill-tempered comber, and as a result received severe cuts and bruises when they were left high but far from dry, on the rocks.

Miss Stockton landed so hard that she required hospital treatment after she was finally rescued from the tormenting torrent. Her friend called the Carmel police who, in the persons of Frank Hay and Ralph Casserly, administered first aid and took Miss Stockton, daughter of Lt. Col. M. L. Stockton, to the Presidio hospital.

Malcolm Whitman told us he didn't mind us calling him two different names in one paragraph—Whitman and Whitaker—but he objected slightly to our high recommendation of water skis for skitter-towing on the beach because financially a skitterboard is nearer the reach of the average person than the skis Whitman is sincere exponent of skittering and he hopes it becomes popular because you don't know what you have missed in the way of thrills and spills until you have skittered.

DANCE TO AID RED CROSS

It was announced today that the Junior Red Cross plans to give a dance Saturday, Apr. 11.

A short time ago Lucian D. Scott, former teacher at Carmel High school, sent a letter to our organization. He suggested that we in the Junior Red Cross raise money for sending gifts to the men in the Army hospital at Fort Richardson, Anchorage, Alaska. This is one worthy fund to which the proceeds of this dance will go.

Mr. Schaefer, in his address to the students a few weeks ago, asked if we would send a representative of Carmel High School to the annual Red Cross convention in Sacramento. The remainder of the money will be put into the fund for sending such a person to our state capital.

This dance was planned by Doris Evans, chairman of the fund-raising committee, and a group of assistants. Howard Levinson will be master of ceremonies.

The decorations will probably be in the national Red Cross colors, red and white. Through a secret source it has been revealed that there will be plenty of fun and entertainment.

Remember, Saturday night at comedy of the first water. The 8:30 in the high school library. The tickets are on sale for only 40c. Girls free.

REPORT CARDS OUT 4N NN

"A's", and "D", "B's" and and "C's" are the rage at high school. Grades are out. Last Monday marked the beginning of the last quarter.

This is the time to take stock. What has happened at high school during the last quarter? What has happened to the campus? What has the student body done?

To answer the first question: our campus has been shooting up. The seeds of grass that we planted last fall have become a carpet of green. The buildings, though not so fast-growing, are nearly ready for use.

As for the student body, it has made great progress. We put over the program "Marco Polo'; we have initiated corridor control by the students and the Student Court, and we have helped the Red Cross and National Defense.

Has not the Carmel High School done well? Are we not lucky to have such an able leader as Howard Levinson?

Some Choice Invective from Rowntree And Our Feeble Attempt at Reply

Editor, The Cymbal:

In your paper of Good Friday I find columns about Anne Sheridan, Clanging Cymbals, The First Galley, Garden Gleanings, Over the Cracker Barrel, and signed W. K. B.

In vain I looked for news and information about the Civilian Defense which should be of more importance to every Carmel American than any of the "STUFF" as above captioned.

You have an editorial comment entitled, "This C. D. Sabotage". I trust that your insinuations are not true, but if true, it is hardly likely it will do as much harm as your neglect to tell your readers what Civilian Defense is doing and planning to do.

Now don't tell me you were not given any news. I don't know whether you were or not, but it should not be necessary. You have what (out of politeness) are called reporters. The assumption is that they dig up news, or do you only print the item, personals and notices that are brought into (sic) you?

If you knew we were at war, the front page would not be too good for Civilian Defense news that you and your staff had gone after and got. If we are licked it will be because we deserve to be.

Yours in dead earnest,
BERNARD ROWNTREE

My dear Mr. Rowntree:

My first reaction to your letter was anger, and not an anger that could be classified as mild. Later, in thinking it over, I decided that I could probably contribute to the welfare of the newspaper-reading public by declining to print it. Thus I would not be encouraging your tendency to write voluminous letters to newspapers about once a week and on about every subject under the sun; letters that, in many instances, could so aptly come under the heading of "STUFF". My third thought was to print your letter with no comment other than a heading reading:

A PERFECT EXAMPLE OF WHAT PEOPLE DISLIKE IN BERNARD ROWNTREE

Then, letting six solid hours go by, I read your letter again and I found myself back to the not-mild anger. My first reactions have most always been correct. I must admit to you, however, that this second return of the first reaction was fed somewhat by my thoughts during those six solid hours about what I had done, physically and mentally, between 6 o'clock on Monday of last week and 9:30 o'clock on the morning of the following Friday when my paper came out. I thought of the work I had done, what I had tried with all my might to do, and my own discouragement in the result.

It is true that a man who essays to edit a newspaper has no valid excuse for producing a poor one, but it is equally true that he may have an explanation for it. Things went wrong with me last week. As you perhaps know, I am endeavoring to meet my current expenses each week. In order to do this I am compelled to do most of the manual labor on my newspaper as well as a good share of the mental. On Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays I sit down at the keyboard of a type-setting machine about 5 o'clock in the afternoon and set type until midnight—sometimes 1 and 2 o'clock. (It takes some time to get back your speed in that work after not having done it for a long time, and I'm not very fast yet.) My wife makes me a couple of very good sandwiches which I eat at around 7 p. m. while working.

Then, on Thursdays I go to this work at 10 o'clock in the morning, and work steadily at the machine and the page-form tables until the forms are ready for the press. After the papers are run off (it takes three-quarters of an hour), I bring them to the office (1400 of them last week) and with the help of Pauline Meeks, I get out the mail, a job requiring about two hours. Sometimes I arrive at the office with the papers at midnight Thursday night; sometimes at 1 o'clock Friday morning. It has been as late as 3 o'clock Friday morning. But last week things went wrong, as I say, and through a chain of circumstances too long to detail, and which you wouldn't understand if I did, I didn't get here with my 1400 papers until five minutes to 5 o'clock Friday morning. I couldn't, or, anyway, I didn't get the help of Pauline at that hour and had to do the mailing myself. I managed to get the local papers and the mail for Monterey county to the post office by 7 o'clock mailing time, but couldn't accomplish the outside mail until after 8 o'clock. I went home a little after 9 o'clock and to bed. If you'll add up those hours from 6 o'clock Thursday morning when I got up, until 9:30 o'clock Friday morning when I got to bed, you'll get a total of 27½ hours.

Now, with that length of time steadily at work you'd think that I could have produced a better newspaper, wouldn't you? But things went wrong on that end, too, and you'll just have to take my word for it that the paper didn't contain what I wanted it to, or what I had tried very hard to get into it. I could only make you understand by having had you with me those 27½ hours steadily and I am mad enough about your letter to wish to hell you had been.

Anyway, on Saturday, the day I received your kindly letter, I paid all my bills for the week, and this new, resurrected Cymbal may not amount to much, but it doesn't owe a cent except the telephone bill which I haven't received yet.

But there's one statement in your letter I'd like to answer, skipping the nasty references to "STUFF" and "'out of politeness' called reporters". You refer to my "insinuations" about C. D. sabotage. I'd like to tell you that as a member of the city council and as a man as interested in Civilian Defense as you claim to be, you should know that these are a great deal more than "insinuations". I would also like to tell you that although I intended to print the Civilian Defense news as provided me by Frederick Bechdolt and Hal Garrott, my editorial about this sabotage was of more value to the Civilian Defense organization in Carmel right now than 12 solid pages of C. D. news. If you don't believe me, ask Mayor Keith Evans and Bechdolt, himself.

You are a good councilman. It occurs to me that if you added to your work in municipal affairs (or C. D. interests) the time and thought you spend, and so often waste, in the inditing of letters to the newspapers, you'd be the world's most remarkable councilman. May I suggest that, so far as The Cymbal is concerned, you stick to your last, to your council work and insurance business, and let me edit my newspaper. Really, I know a hell of a lot more about that than you, with all your ability, could ever learn.

Yours in deadlier earnest,
—W. K. BASSETT

GARDEN GLEANINGS

By PLANTSMITH

Have you ever planted a dozen or so varieties of seeds in one large flat and then found that one or more rows germinate ahead of the others and are nearly ready for transplanting before the slow-to-germinate kinds have shown their timid heads above the soil? Well, I have done that myself, too. Mostly because the flats are so handy and because it is so easy to sow the seeds in rows. But the big difficulty comes when the quick-growing varieties are ready to harden-off for transplanting out-of-doors. And one wouldn't dare to move the whole flat outside for the sake of the quick ones; then the slow types would no longer have the protection of the cold frame. (I'm taking it for granted that you would have some sort of protective covering for starting seeds.)

There are all sorts of gadgets on the market for simplifying the matter of germination, especially the application of moisture. Everything from wick water feeders to sub-irrigation pans. They may each have a particular—or peculiar—merit, but I recently stumbled onto a little trick that seems so good I'm going to pass it along to my readers (or is it reader?—I'm sure the editor reads this to see that no "bugs" get by in the copy, so am sure of at least one reader).

Take a four-inch flower pot and fill it level full with the prepared soil recommended for seedage use. Fill loosely without pressing; then take a 2¼-inch pot and press firmly in the center of the larger pot to a depth of about an inch. The resulting depression in the large pot is just about the exact size of an empty nickel ice-cream cup or paper drinking cup. Before placing the cup in the recess punch a number of holes in the side just above the bottom rim, using a small nail, ice pick or pen knife. Then place the cup in the recess, hold firmly with one hand and with the other press the remaining rim of soil in the large pot. Now for the seed. Just a sprinkling on the soil in that space between the cup and the pot rim, a light covering of fine soil or sand and a gentle firming and your automatic seed grower is ready for use. From then on it's only a matter of filling the paper cup once or twice daily. No worrying that you will wash out the fine seeds or the tender seedlings as so often happens when using a sprinkling can Besides, it really looks cute to see the small plants entirely surrounding their little cup—reminds me of a mother hen with her fluffy brood.

A change can be made as soon as one pot is ready for moving without disturbing the slower sorts, and it really is surprising how long the seedlings can be left in their original pot before transplanting. If the idea sounds good to you I assure you there will be no charges brought by me for infringement of patent; I hereby relinquish all claim to patent rights and royalty.

Well, folks; this is my "swan song." I have tried to tell you from time to time that I need questions and suggestions as to what to write about but none seem forthcoming. So I write whatever "comes into my head" or whatever comes out of this writing machine, but always with no definite mark to shoot at. And after last week's exposure of a family weed feud I realized the acuteness of this topic famine. (I'm happy to say there is still a "vacancy" sign on the "Dogwood Domicile", which means that I am not an occupant). But I am not in the writing business and it seems a waste of your time and mine to continue doing something that does not carry the stamp of urgency.

Schnabel, Hiney Are Girls, Not Army Men

Remember Constant Eater's "Anderson, Peterson, Schnabel and Hiney" rhyme that was picked up by Herb Caen? Well, have we been victimized—and by the army, too? The four named occupants of the house which, for rhyme's sake, "Constant Eater" said was tiny, aren't army officers, at all. They're school teachers, and the ranks painted before their names on their house sign were supplied by some army boy friends. So, we get the following in the mail from the girls:

Anderson, Peterson, Schnabel
und Hiney
Live in a house not especially tiny.
Rooms number to nine, exceeding the rule,
Spacious back yard, garden
swing and a pool.
(House available for the summer).

We're ladies, the four of us.
Someone played a prank.
We see we've been labeled in honorable rank.
The General lives here.
We give ourselves up.
For General McArthur is only our pup.

Red Cross Mobile Canteen Needs Equipment

A group of patriotic Peninsula women under Red Cross supervision, are working to equip a trailer to be used as the first unit of a mobile canteen, and many articles are still needed.

"Look Who's Laughing" at Carmel Theater; "Bahama Passage" Coming

"Look Who's Laughing", starting tonight at Carmel Theater, is advertised by its producers as "the combined mirth of the world's two top-ranking radio programs, as enjoyed by 65,000,000 listeners weekly, now brought to the motion picture public in a rousing screen frolic." Little more could be asked, one would suppose.

The headliners are Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Fibber McGee and Molly, with Lucille Ball for beauty and additional comedy. The companion picture, "The Gay Falcon", starring George Sanders and Wendy Barrie, is a mystery entire program holds over until tomorrow night, with regular 2 o'clock Saturday matinee.

"Bahama Passage", Technicolor adventure story, starring Madeleine Carroll and Stirling Hayden, opens Sunday's continuous program for a run of three days. Filmed in the British West Indies, the production required more than a hundred Hollywood players and technicians to make the long "location" journey of 4000 miles and back, one of the longest and most costly cinematic treks on record. Coupled with the romantic and stirring film drama is the sterner and more realistic drama of March of Time No. 8, "The Argentine Question."

Wednesday and Thursday, April 15 and 16, bring to Carmel Theater a first-rate double bill, "The Night of January 16th", with Robert Preston, Ellen Drew and Nils Asther in an entertaining mirth-and-murder melange, and "The Perfect Snob", a clean-cut, well-made comedy starring Lynn Bari and Charles Ruggles.

Kuster to Repeat Readings Tuesday

Virtually unheralded, Edward Kuster last Friday afternoon laid at Carmel's feet some priceless literary and dramatic treasures. The program, given informally in the Greenroom, was heard by some 50 persons, all of whom were enthusiastic in their request that the program be repeated without delay before a wider audience. Kuster, Carmel's long-time producer, director and actor, whose recent association with Max Reinhardt in the latter's Theater Workshop, brought him to Hollywood's notice, will repeat his program on Tuesday evening, April 14, 8:15. The material from which he will make his "Readings and Comments" will be the following interesting and timely works: John Steinbeck's "The Moon Is Down", Robinson Jeffers' "Be Angry at the Sun", Homer Lea's "The Valor of Ignorance" and "The Day of the Saxon", and Marice Browne's exquisite reverie over peacetime Burma, Ceylon and Tibet entitled "I Remember."

At 10:15 Tuesday, after the program, the Playhouse will be turned over to the audience for coffee, music and conversation.

LORITA BAKER VALLELY AT DEL MONTE TUESDAY

Lorita Baker Vallely will be back on the Peninsula again Tuesday, April 14, to present another interesting lecture of her "Streamlined Symposium of World Affairs and Current Literature."

For Tuesday's program, Hotel Del Monte, at 3:30 p. m., Miss Vallely will speak on problems in the United States blocked at present by selfish interests.

Further information about the Vallely series may be obtained by calling Kit Whitman, Tel. 1222 or 618.

The Cymbal Recommends

voters at Tuesday's election than Fred Godwin. He has been an important part of the government over the past two years. His role has not been one that has resulted in cheers and publicity, but it has been none the less effective. The other members of the board will attest to Godwin's vital contribution to the work they have done and are doing.

The success and community importance of his sole and exclusive commercial interest in Carmel—La Playa Hotel—have manifest the ability, stability and efficient capacity of Fred Godwin. His commercial interest here has been an outstanding credit to Carmel and has done much to give this city the proper kind of advertising as a community of intelligence and culture. His development of La Playa Hotel's summer annex up Carmel Valley has resulted in a garden spot unequalled throughout the west for beauty, taste and inspiring atmosphere.

All the faculties Godwin has displayed in the upbuilding and improvement of his commercial interest he has given to his work on the city council. Quietly, as is his wont, but with conscientiousness and persistence, he has made his contribution to the conduct of municipal affairs by the present city council. He should be retained on the council as a sensible act of the community in furthering its own welfare.

P. A. McCreery

P. A. McCreery has stood for the past two years on what is considered the tough spot on the city council. As commissioner of streets he has been brought into closest contact with the people and, in many instances, most unpleasant contact. It has always been in the nature of property owners and street users in bouncing out of a chuck hole or rut to see in the aura of their anger a mental picture of the commissioner of streets.

But with good humor and conscientious effort, efficiency and success, McCreery has been meeting his task. Against odds that have not been faced by previous street commissioners, he has gone on to stretch what materials have been available to him over the widest area and to the most effective purpose. With the aid of the uncannily able superintendent of streets, Bill Askew, he has made a diligent study of street improvement needs and today, more than any one man, with the exception of Askew, knows the ins and outs of street work and Carmel's problems of transportation.

In addition to his conscientiousness and sincerity of purpose and efficient conduct of street affairs against increasing difficulties, he has manifest on the city council an independence of thought and action that has proved his high character as a man and as a city official. He has steadfastly stood for those things he believed to be to the best interests of the community at large and he has not permitted influences of any kind to restrain him or turn his course.

P. A. McCreery is a fine public servant. He should be returned to the city council as should Fred Godwin, who has been working with him in municipal affairs.

The Cymbal has no axe to grind in its support of Godwin and McCreery. The editor of this newspaper has received no special favors from the members of the present city council. As a matter of fact the only personal request made of them was flatly refused. I asked them to appoint me a member of the council when Herbert Heron resigned. They wouldn't do it. (Perhaps I am putting my best recommendation for them at the very last.)
